PASSENGERS SCARED BUT NOT HURT.

Collision Occurred in the Early Morning in the Main Ship Channel—Heavy
Mist Was on the Water at the Time.

Quick action alone saved the Mallory Line stoamship Colorado from going to the bottom at 3 o'clock yesterday morning in the main ship channel, northwest of Sandy Hook. The steamer was bound in from Brunswick, Ga., with twenty-eight passengers on board and a cargo of lumber and naval supplies, when dumping scow No. 15, belonging to the Bouker Contracting Company, of this city, struck her on the starboard bow about twenty-five feet abaft the cutwater. The scow, piled high with dirt, was bound out to sea in tow of the tag Charles Runyon.

A big hole was smashed in the Colorado's starboard plates, and she began to fill rapidly. Capitain Burrows, who was on the bridge, at once headed the yessel for shoal water, and she grounded in twenty-one feet on the tail of the West Bank, some distance inside of bouy No. 7.
